

22 September 2014 - Ahead of the Climate Summit , hundreds of thousands marched the streets in New York and other parts of the world, demanding urgent action on climate change. Twelve-year old Marija Borozan was on her first ever protest march, exclaiming, “The world matters, I want to save the environment.” (Girl from cover photo)

Politicians, celebrities, activists and the general public marched through New York to highlight global concerns about a lack of international action to stop the harmful effects of climate change. Speaking to journalists after walking with demonstrators on the People's Climate March through New York City on Sunday, Secretary-General Ban-Ki Moon said "I am overwhelmed by such a strong power, energy and voice of the people, I hope this voice will be truly reflected to the leaders when they meet on September 23rd," .

WE HEREBY DEMAND THAT THE GOVERNMENT STOP THE CLIMATE CHANGE DENIAL AND TAKE ACTION TO PROTECT OUR PLANET AND FUTURE GENERATIONS.
