

October 2014 – UNRIC's October newsletter takes a look at some Nordic companies' controversial commercial involvement in occupied Western Sahara, despite national rhetoric.

We have interviewed Icelandic nurse Gunnhildur Arnadottir , who tells us about her experiences of fighting Ebola in West Africa for three months. We also had a chat with Mattias Sundholm from Sweden, UN profile of the month, who works at CTEd - the Executive Directorate of the UN Counter-Terrorism Committee.

And, last but not least, we take a look at a group of elderly Norwegians who got tired of doing nothing, and decided to build a better future for their grandchildren by taking on the fight against climate change.
