

Today we celebrate the United Nations Day – In Europe there is a “Back to School” initiative to engage young people around the United Nations values and the sustainable development goals.

Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs of Belgium, Didier Reynders, visited Institute Saint-Boniface in Brussels where he held a lively discussion with a group of 15-18 year about the challenges the UN faces day-to-day, diplomacy, and multilateralism.

UNRIC staff members have also made presentations about the United Nations organization – its values and its history – around schools in Belgium and in Europe. One representative, Fabienne Pompey, Head of the UNRIC French Desk, noted that the pupils were surprisingly interested in the 17 Sustainable Development Goals and started to question how they could engage with the UN or local organizations to promote this agenda and to take part in transforming the world. She expressed that “This was a great feeling. For the first time, I had the feeling that the SDGs were really able to inspire the youth”.

Around Europe, other events have been organized to celebrate UN Day. In Geneva, UN colleagues will inaugurate a monumental art installation by Spanish artist Cristóbal Gabarrón entitled the “Enlightened Universe” at Rotonde Mont-Blanc, Geneva.

Gabarrón’s “Enlightened Universe” will be inaugurated at Rotonde Mont-Blanc in Geneva in the presence of the artist himself, along with key representatives from the UN, other international organisations, and the City of Geneva.

The installation is an interactive sculpture depicting 70 life-size figures joined in hand around a central globe, creating a human chain of global citizenship, solidarity, tolerance, respect for nature, and shared responsibility. It was originally created for the 70th anniversary of the United Nations last year. Geneva is the installation’s first stop in Europe after its inaugural exhibition last year in New York’s Central Park. After departing Geneva in mid-December, “Enlightened Universe” will travel to other European cities in 2017 and 2018.

The United Nations has been working towards peace, sustainable development and human rights for 71 years. This year also marks the first anniversary of the 17 Global Goals for Sustainable Development, which guide our action for a better future for all on a healthy planet.

UNITED NATIONS
DAY 2016

10 REDUCED
INEQUALITIES

Raise your voice against discrimination.

Take action with the Sustainable Development Goals app: SDGsinaction.com

