

22.6.2017 – A crisis of migration governance at all levels continues to unfold, United Nations Special Representative for International Migration, Louise Arbour, told the European Parliament yesterday.

During a high level conference on migration management, ahead of the European Council meeting set to start today, United Nations representatives, along with members of the European Commission and Parliament, gathered to discuss migration challenges and opportunities.

Root causes, irregular migration, returns and integration were some of the topics on the front burner, requiring a collective, global response that in many cases has been lacking so far.

~~Policy and Strategy for the United Kingdom, 2017-2020. The United Kingdom has a long history of migration and has been a leading country in the world in terms of migration. The United Kingdom has a strong tradition of welcoming people from other countries and has been a leading country in the world in terms of migration. The United Kingdom has a strong tradition of welcoming people from other countries and has been a leading country in the world in terms of migration.~~