

12 January 2018. The United Nations Secretary-General has warned that countries which erect major obstacles to migration are inflicting “economic self-harm” on their economies.

The Secretary-General, Mr. António Guterres, has published a report on migration which serves as an input into negotiations that are underway on a Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration.

At the launch of his report “Making Migration Work For All” at UN Headquarters in New York, 11 January, Mr. Guterres called for a focus on what he called “the overwhelming positives of migrations and to use facts not prejudice as the basis for addressing the challenges.”

Migration: Guterres warns of the “self-harm” of erecting barriers

Friday, 12 January 2018 11:35

The Guardian | Deutsche | English | Español | Français | Italiano | Português | العربية | 한국어 | 日本語 | русский | ไทย | Українська | 中文