

On 26 February 2018, Ciné-ONU screened 'Thank you for the Rain' at the eighth Luxembourg City Film Festival to underline a range of issues linked to climate change, including climate justice, urbanization, gender equality, education, access to water and climate refugees.

The film tells the story of a charismatic and resourceful Kenyan farmer @KisiluMovie, who uses a camera to show his day-to-day survival against increasingly extreme and unpredictable climate change and the devastation that it brings to his family and local community. The film was shown in partnership with Time for Equality at Ciné Utopia in Luxembourg.

The screening was followed by a dialogue on the issues highlighted in the film. The guest speakers included: Carole Dieschbourg, Minister for the Environment in Luxembourg; Nick Nuttall, Director of Communications and Outreach at the UNFCCC; moderated by Dr. Christopher Lilyblad.
